

Pacific
WEDDINGS®

escape to maui
REAL WEDDINGS
destination gowns

tulip bouquets
A FRENCH FÊTE
vintage favors
hawaii's hot spots
WINE COUNTRY WEDDINGS
stylish swimsuits

a time to love

PHOTOGRAPHY BY M. BELLE | TEXT BY ROBIN CHA

LORRAINE KELLEY & RAYMOND QUON
GAINNEY VINEYARD, SANTA YNEZ, CALIFORNIA
JUNE 13, 2009

If, as the saying goes, timing is everything, then Raymond Quon can consider himself one fortunate individual. The weekend before his actual marriage proposal, he managed to woo his fiancée, Lorraine Kelley, by presenting her with a watch, knowing she was anticipating a wedding ring when he took her to a romantic dinner at their favorite Italian restaurant; he successfully confused his intended by postponing his proposal until the following weekend. It was then that Ray welcomed her home after a long day with an immense bouquet of red roses. In the center was a large red heart made of construction paper which read simply, "I love you. Spend the rest of your life with me." As she swung around to face him, she realized he was down on one knee requesting her hand in marriage. His timing, indeed, was impeccable. Their families had arranged to be in California the very next week to attend their graduation from UCLA, at which time Ray cleverly planned to make the family introductions.

